University Place, WA 98466

The University Place Community Garden (UPCG) is committed to increasing access to fresh food through reducing major barriers of community garden participation for residents who may not otherwise have such access. Supports for community garden participation are also available for those who are starting on their gardening journey. culturally underrepresented gardeners, those with barriers to access gardening including disability, income, or experience are encouraged to apply.

Thanks to the generous support of the Whole Foods team in University Place and the receipt of the Communities First Grant, we are equipped to tackle the critical challenges of fresh food accessibility, affordability, and food insecurity in our community.
